Wanderlust Travel Website

Project Explanation and Page-by-Page Overview

This document explains the purpose, layout, navigation, and visible features of the Wanderlust travel website based on the supplied screenshots.

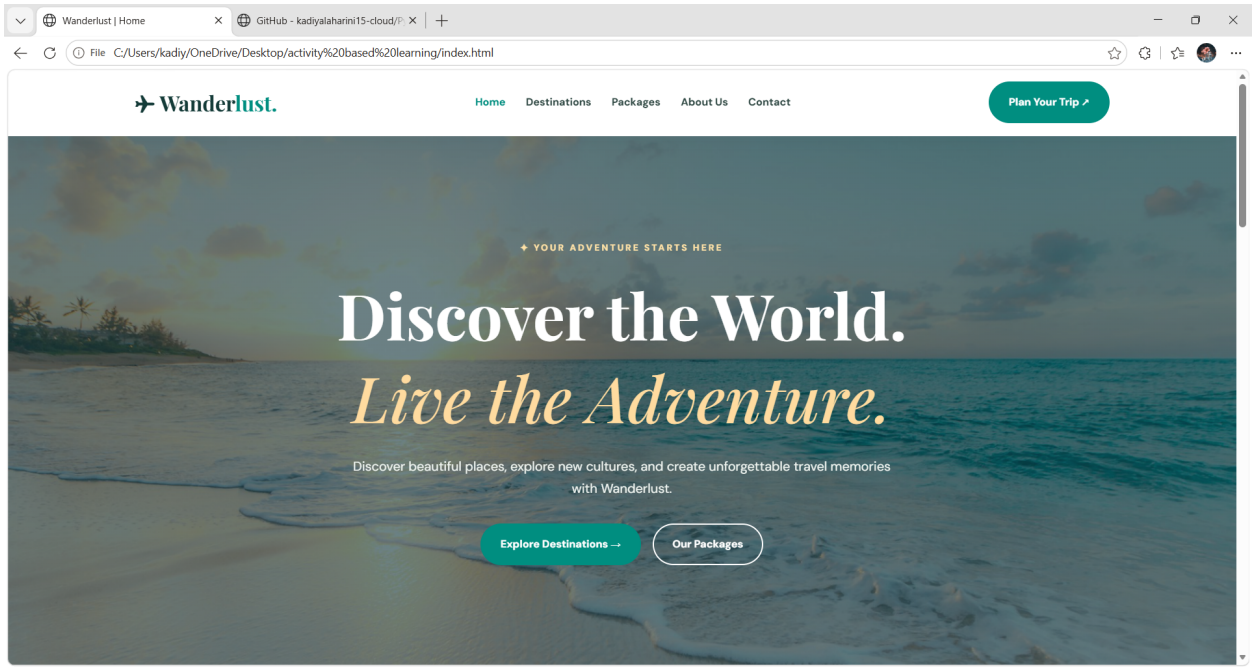

Figure 1. Wanderlust home page

Project overview

Wanderlust is a travel-agency concept website designed to help visitors discover destinations, explore holiday packages, learn about the agency, and submit a travel inquiry. The design uses large scenic photographs, dark overlays for readable hero text, a white navigation bar, deep green headings, and teal call-to-action buttons.

Main objectives

• Present travel destinations in an attractive and easy-to-browse format.

• Show sample holiday packages to help visitors imagine possible trips.

• Introduce the agency and communicate its travel-focused identity.

• Provide a contact and inquiry form for visitors to practice submitting travel preferences.

• Keep navigation consistent across all pages.

1. Home Page

The home page is the main entry point. Its hero section displays the headline “Discover the World. Live the Adventure.” over a beach background. A short supporting sentence introduces the website, followed by two prominent actions: “Explore Destinations” and “Our Packages.” These buttons guide visitors toward the main browsing sections.

Key elements

• Brand identity: the Wanderlust name and airplane symbol appear at the top left.

• Navigation: Home, Destinations, Packages, About Us, and Contact links are displayed in the header.

• Primary call to action: “Plan Your Trip” is emphasized as a teal rounded button.

• Visual hierarchy: large serif headings and contrasting colors draw attention to the main message.

Purpose: welcome visitors and direct them to explore the site.

2. Destinations Page

The destinations page introduces places visitors may want to explore. The hero area uses a lake-and-mountain photograph with the heading “Beautiful Destinations” and a short message about discovering extraordinary places. Below the hero, the “Choose Your Dream Destination” section introduces the destination collection.

Purpose: inspire visitors and provide a starting point for browsing travel locations. Destination cards or listings would typically follow the introductory section.

3. Travel Packages Page

The packages page presents holiday-package information. Its hero image shows an airplane wing at sunset and includes the heading “Explore Travel Packages.” The next section, “Featured Travel Packages,” introduces a curated set of sample travel offers.

Purpose: help visitors compare sample trips and identify a package that suits their interests. A complete package listing may include destination, duration, highlights, and estimated price if those details are implemented.

4. About Us Page

The About Us page communicates the story and identity of Wanderlust. Its hero section says “Our Story, Your Journey,” with a subtitle about a passion for travel and extraordinary destinations. Below it, the “Who We Are” section begins with the heading “Travel Beyond the Ordinary,” supported by a scenic image and introductory text.

Purpose: build trust by explaining what the travel website represents, its interests, and the type of experience it aims to offer. The page can also contain the agency’s mission, values, or approach to planning trips.

5. Contact Page

The contact page encourages visitors to begin planning a trip. The hero section reads “Let’s Plan Your Adventure,” followed by a message asking about the visitor’s destination and travel preferences. The visible content below includes a “Have a Dream Destination?” introduction and a “Travel Inquiry Form.” The form begins with a Full Name field.

Typical inquiry-form fields may include

• Full name and contact information.

• Preferred destination or type of trip.

• Travel dates, number of travellers, or package preferences.

• Additional requirements or a message.

The screenshots show a demonstration form. They do not confirm that submissions are stored, emailed, or connected to a backend service.

Common Design and Navigation

• Consistent header: the same brand and navigation menu appear across the pages.

• Active-page indication: the current section is highlighted in teal.

• Hero banners: large background images create a strong first impression.

• Color palette: white, deep green, and teal are used for a calm travel-oriented appearance, with warm gold accents in hero labels.

• Typography: serif display headings provide an editorial feel, while sans-serif body text supports readability.

• Responsive consideration: the layout should be tested on mobile, tablet, and desktop widths.

Suggested Technical Description

Based on the screenshots, this is a multi-page front-end website with separate pages for Home, Destinations, Packages, About Us, and Contact. The screenshots alone do not identify the exact implementation technologies. If built with standard web technologies, HTML can define the page structure, CSS can style layouts and colors, and JavaScript can add interactions such as navigation behavior or form validation.

Testing Checklist

• Verify that each navigation link opens the correct page.

• Check that the “Plan Your Trip,” “Explore Destinations,” and “Our Packages” actions work as intended.

• Confirm that text remains readable over background images.

• Test the inquiry form’s required fields and validation.

• Check layout and image scaling on desktop and mobile screens.

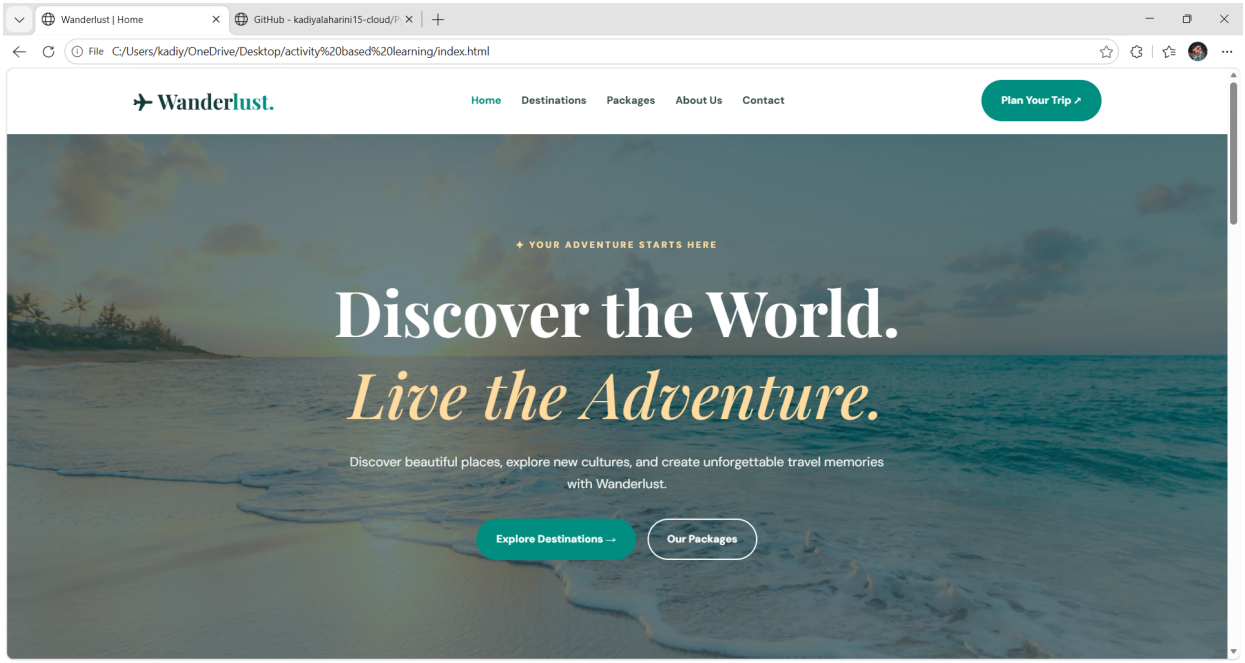

• If form submission is intended to be functional, test its success and error states and confirm where the data is sent.

Conclusion

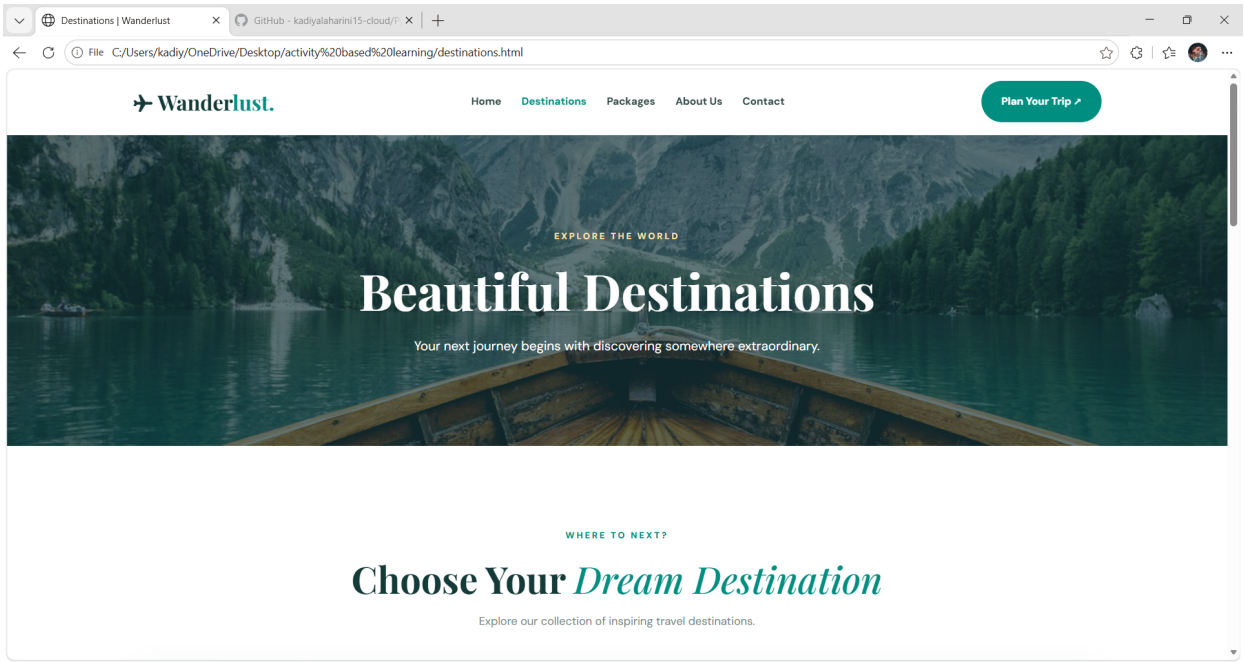

Wanderlust uses a consistent visual style to guide visitors from inspiration to trip inquiry. The Home page introduces the experience, Destinations highlights places to explore, Packages presents sample holidays, About Us explains the concept, and Contact provides a way to express travel preferences. Together, these pages form a clear structure for a travel-agency website prototype.

Appendix: Screenshots

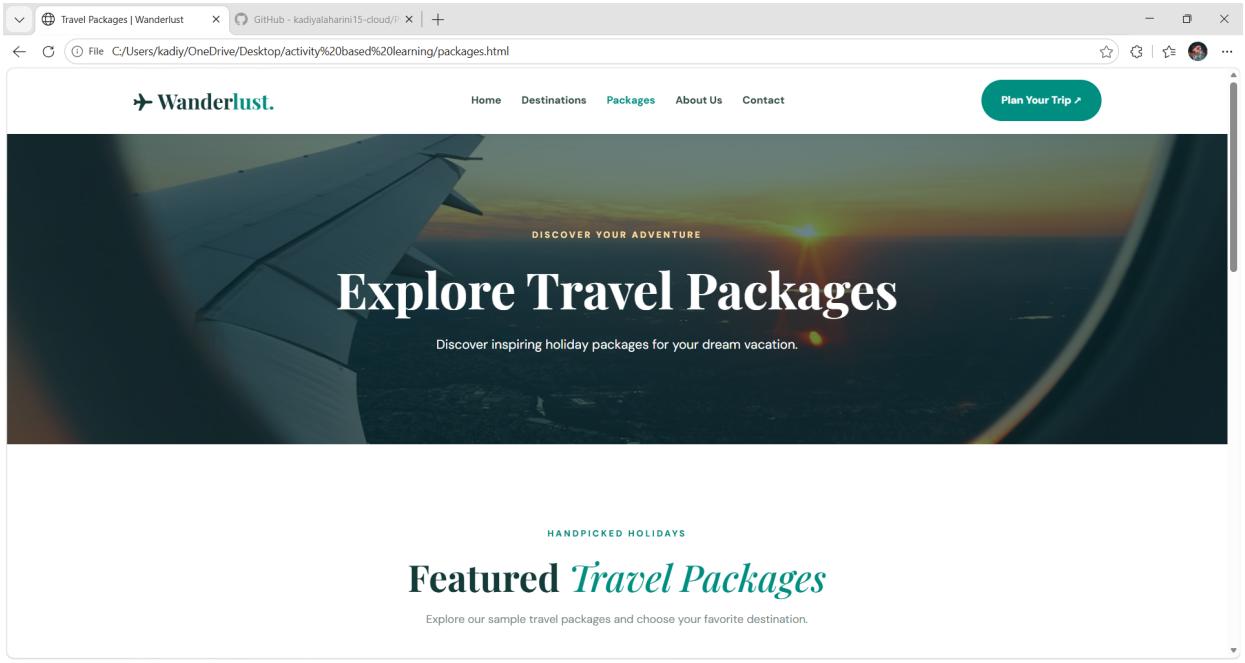

Home Page

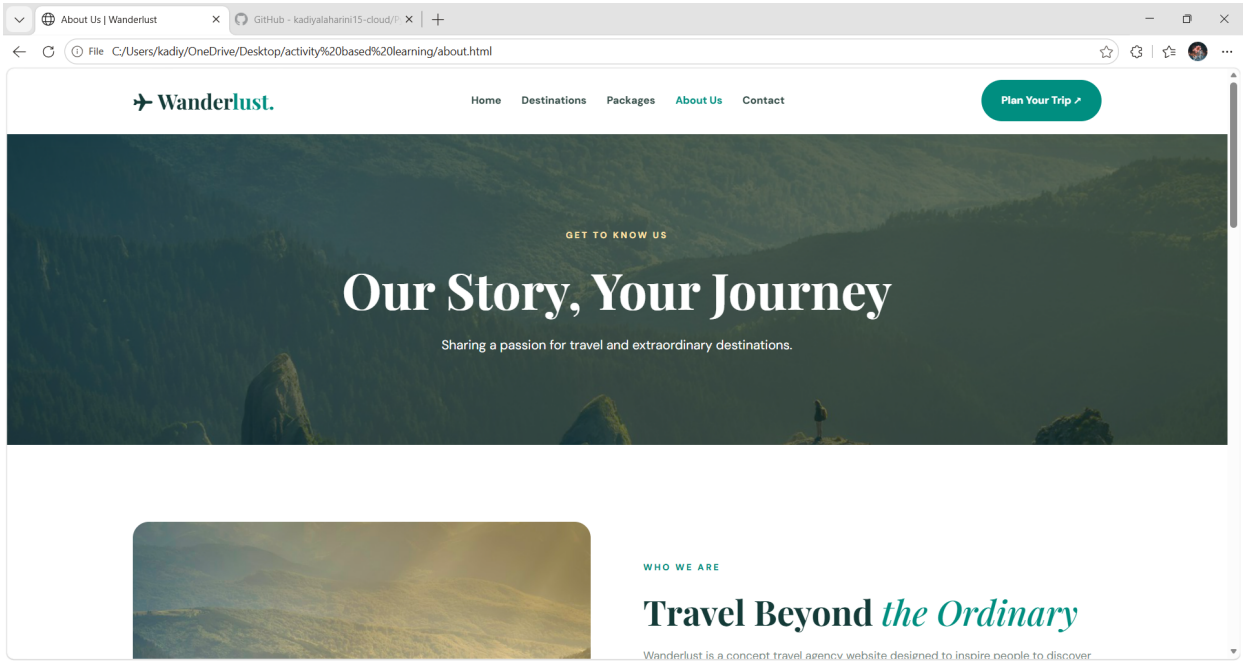

Destinations Page

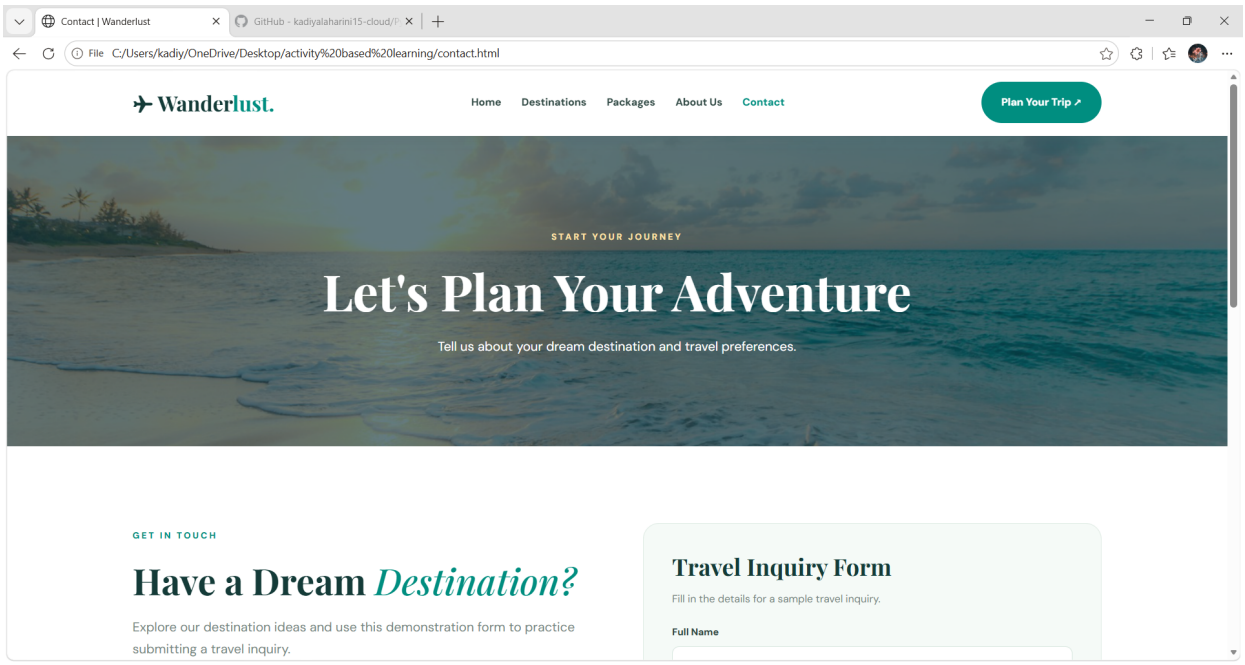

Travel Packages Page

About Us Page

Contact Page

Contact | Wanderlust
File C:/Users/kadiy/OneDrive/Desktop/activity%20based%20learning/contact.html
Wanderlust.
Home
Destinations
Packages
About Us
Contact
Plan Your Trip ↗
START YOUR JOURNEY
Let's Plan Your Adventure
Tell us about your dream destination and travel preferences.
GET IN TOUCH
Have a Dream Destination?
Explore our destination ideas and use this demonstration form to practice submitting a travel inquiry.
Travel Inquiry Form
Fill in the details for a sample travel inquiry.
Full Name